

the day with the one hundred and one things that need to be done, such as: washing, dressing, cleaning, shopping, and cooking. They could not stay in bed if 30 they wanted to. It is as if the morning is drawing them up and out of bed into a higher energy level. They are (ウ) and industrious in the morning. ⁽³⁾Often they cook elaborate breakfasts for everyone and serve as human alarm clocks for the rest of the sleepers. It seems as though they get everything going in the morning which, in turn, makes everything easier for the others. From their point
 35 of view, it is difficult to be quiet while you are cleaning, and it simply is not fair to ask them to wait until everyone is up. It is a waste of time for them, especially when ⁽⁴⁾one of my sisters is always falling asleep on the couch in front of the television. Why should they suffer because of someone else's habits? It is not as if they do not try, but how quiet can they be? Waking someone up is unavoidable.
 40 ⁽⁵⁾They feel it is their rights that are being interfered with, not the sleepers'. This war is sure to go on indefinitely with neither side winning, because there will always be those who like to sleep late and those who do not. Neither side is right or wrong, good or bad. They have different biological time clocks which more than likely will never change.
